This whole "P. Diddy's StarMaker" thing is getting redundant, but at least it's in a good way. St. Louis singer Todd Sarvies survived another installment of the show this week, and is one step closer to a Bad Boy Records contract.

Sarvies performed an original song for the first time on the reality, something called "Flatline," and it was a winner. Judges called him a rock star, said he was a beautiful car crash they couldn't take their eyes off of, that he was fearless, and that not too many of the contestants were making them smile the way he did. Guest judge Lady Gaga said Sarvies has that "thing," that "screw loose" that everybody wants to see, whatever that means.

"P. Diddy's StarMaker" airs Sunday nights on MTV.
