STL's Sarvies heads for finale of P. Diddy show...narrowly

Todd Sarvies of "P. Diddy's StarMaker"

On the last elimination show before the finale of "P. Diddy's StarMaker" program on MTV, St. Louis singer Todd Sarvies moved forward once again.

He'll face off with two other singers next week for a Bad Boy contract.

But it was a tough one for former front-runner Sarvies, who narrowly missed elimination after his performance of "Ready, Set, Go!" by Tokio Hotel.

Judges said he always brings the energy, is fearless and non manufactured, that it's clear he loves what he does, and that he gave moments of pure genius.

That judge Kelly Rowland said it was clear why he was still in the competition.

But he was also called predictable, and told he still needed work.

Earlier in the program, the contestants had to meet with the media, and Sarvies, who didn't fare well, was described as a "reluctant star." The interview showed that Sarvies, who is a musical beast on stage, needs to bring some of that dynamic off stage.

But thanks for his shout out to "local press" during the segment.

"P. Diddy's StarMaker" airs Sunday nights on MTV.
